Simon did ask Martin the other day about this and Martin said the only document that was missing due to an error on my part was the statement of facts as I had sent him the old insurance one which I corrected by him sending me the one he needed by email and then getting Simon to sign it and sending it back to Martin. Simon has never changed his address on his of Driving Licence or his passport they have always been in my address, if you would need one in his address then we would need to send of to DVLA and get it changed which he has never wanted to do as he feels safer that they always come to my addresse as he sometimes does not get his mail to his address. We have never had any problems before due to them being in my address, do you need the Driving Licence changed to his address for a reason?
